

The Executive Education Collection™

Advanced Management
Program 2004

Harvard Business School

History of the Chairs

Of all the colleges and universities in the United States, only Harvard has a unique college chair. Its history is part of the history of Harvard. In 1813 the great American architect Charles Bullfinch designed Harvard's University Hall. Now the focus of Harvard Yard, the first floor was then "College Commons". Each class had a dining room, and freshmen were especially raucous. The great philosopher Ralph Waldo Emerson was suspended for a semester for an 1819 food fight that broke some china.

A student with an armload of books needs a handhold to pull the chair from the table, resulting in the unique "cut outs" that distinguish this chair from other college chairs. From the early 1900's replicas with the Harvard seal were sold by the Harvard Alumni Association to raise funds. Today Harvard authorizes only two manufacturers to handcraft these historic replicas. F.W. Lombard is exclusive maker of Harvard Business School open enrollment chairs, as well as the traditional chair with college and HBS seals. Learn more about the chair and the new Harvard-authorized "contemporary" design for those who prefer comfortable higher back support in an elegant college chair.

University Hall in 1880s

EverythingHarvard.com is not affiliated with Harvard University or HBS. We work in cooperation with the Harvard Trademark Program but remain unaffiliated, like The Coop. Our display chair is at The Harvard Book Store. The website and the company are managed by Laurence McKinney, H '66, MBA '69; and his wife, in Arlington, MA. Our partners are members of his MBA classmates. Learn more about us at EverythingHarvard.com.

Everything Harvard, 30 Foster Street, Arlington, MA 02474 tel./fax 781-643-9200 e-mail chairs@everythingharvard.com

©2004, All photographs and logos are copyrighted to their respective owners. All rights reserved.

- Comes with a solid brass name plate

"...my new Harvard chair arrived today--and it is one of the most fabulous pieces of furniture I have ever owned; a true keepsake that I realize, will certainly out-last me.

We are in the process of a build-out for a new suite of offices. After seeing the architect's and the designer's plans for my own office, I decided to buy three university commons style chairs for the area in front of my desk...this chair from Everything Harvard and Lombard is the centerpiece, set-off and absolutely stunning.

I simply wanted, with respect, to tell you how very pleased I am with this addition to my family. You have a terrific business and I wish you the very best in this enterprise." ~ Michael P., MPA

35"h x 21"w x 19"D
28 lbs.
$469.00 (plus $55 p/h)
6 to 8 weeks delivery

~ Exclusive ~

Your Name Here

optional solid brass name
plate at no extra charge

Harvard Business School

Advanced Management
Program 2004

Harvard Business School

Advanced Management
Program 2004

Harvard Business School

Advanced Management
Program 2004

Advanced Management
Program 2004

All seals are silk-screened in gold.
Not shown actual size.

The Executive Education Collection™

Every year more than 20,000 professionals take advantage of Harvard's prestigious open enrollment programs: executives, attorneys, physicians, public health administrators, architects and educators. The demanding programs are structured and taught by the same world-class tenured and senior faculty as standard Harvard degree programs. Tested and challenged by the rigor and discipline of an educational opportunity at Harvard later in life, these men and women return to their lives and their careers strengthened and supported by their experiences in Cambridge and Boston. They treasure memories that will never fade.

In 2004, to honor these open enrollment scholars for effort, enthusiasm and substantial investment of time in the midst of a busy career, Lombard created, and Harvard authorized the Executive Education Collection™ to create a premium chair for the professional's home, office, or practice. For those who prefer grace to grandeur, Harvard also authorized the design and creation of the thoroughly comfortable and elegantly styled "Contemporary". Each is hand crafted, individually numbered and registered in your name by the famous F.W. Lombard Company, holder of Harvard's first authorized license for its traditional college chair.

Learn more about the chairs at everythingharvard.com

"It's not just a chair, it's a tradition."